Keene A. C. In Wrong New Year's Day.—Badly Beaten in Double-Header.—Company D off on New England Trip.

The famous Lauter A. C., who were scheduled for New Year's, were held up on account of injuries to the players and the management did the next best thing and took on Keene for the big double-header, with disastrous results to the Granite state quintet. Company D took both games, the first by the score of 57 to 27 and the second 60 to 25.

The games were too lopsided to be interesting, a fact which is as much or more regretted by the management as by the patrons who paid the bills. After the showing by the Keene five during the past few weeks, during which time they have downed such teams as the Twenty-third Streets, it was only natural to assume that they would give the locals a good run for their money. That they didn't do so can hardly be laid to anyone except themselves. Company D were on the spot ready to do their share toward entertaining the crowd and with the merchandise to deliver. The Keene bunch was also on hand with a liberal supply of "hot air," which was freely dispensed (before the game).

With the exception of Molaghan and McGuigan, the visiting team has about as much business stacking up against the Indians as the Podunk base ball nine has against the "Cubs."

The first period was enough to show the relative strength of the teams. Lacasse and Krueger were used in the floor work and shooting during this period while the forwards did the guarding. The period ended 21 to 6. The remainder of the game was without incident, the visitors not putting up opposition enough to keep the interest.

What has been said of the first game (if anything has been said) was also true of the second. Cameron and Gion tried to stir things up a little, but their attempts to emulate Wistah Jack Johnson were quickly throttled and they evidently realized that this was neither the time nor the place—exit big Albie and little Carrie.

Brennan, Matthews and Wright did some class shooting and Lacasse and Krueger looked after the back field in a way that must have impressed the visitors not a little.

Basket Ball Notes.

Almost a year since Company D lost a game.

McKeesport is going to keep Heiney if they have to mortgage the buildings.

The team has started out on the hunt for some of the big ones. Tonight it's East Boston A. A., tomorrow night Amesbury, Friday night Gloucester, and Saturday night Keene. If what they will do can be gauged by what they have done the natives around that section of the country will probably think a cyclone has been through.

The Yonkers Evening News takes occasion, while commenting on the $50 bonus hung up by the locals, to insinuate that the return game which the winners of the purse have to guarantee Company D might be sidestepped by the latter team. It is rather difficult to appreciate by what process of reasoning they have arrived at this very foolish conclusion. In the first place anyone who has had occasion to do business with the association can testify that any promises or guarantees they have ever made have in every instance been carried out to the letter. In the second place it is we think reasonable to suppose that a team with a team that had defeated them on their own floor would be sought after rather than dodged. The team has never yet met defeat on the local court, but a blind man could see that no better advertisement for a second game could be devised. Finally the offer is on the square and the team is ready to defend it against any team in the world, and the team that wins it gets it.

Lyndonville went up against a tough proposition at Barton Wednesday night. The Barton Monitor says the score was too large to mention. After seeing Lyndonville play here we assume that Barton handed around something pretty good.

The Brattleboro's sporting fraternity are planning on organizing a team to be called the Brattleboro Athletics, but as it will be a strictly local affair, this is probably the last we will hear of them.

Some arrangement for keeping the people in line while purchasing tickets would probably meet with the approval of the patrons and would eliminate some of the rough house proceedings in the entrance.

Chief Muller and Harry Hough, both with the Southsides of Pittsburgh, are vying with each other for the shooting honors in the Central League.

McKeesport has in their line-up the highest priced forward in the business. His name is O'Donnell and his stipend is $75 per week.

"Skeets" Wright versus the great Crowley on the Noddle Island court tonight, and we are thinking Crowley will earn his money.

Brennan missed 11 shots in the first game, but he managed to land three before the game ended, and in the evening game he caged as many as he missed in the afternoon.

Lacasse has made good with the fans. They like the way he works and there is no doubt that he gets results.

1908 IN HISTORY

A Brief but Comprehensive Review of the Important Events and Tendencies of the Year Past For Busy Readers Who Want to Be Well Informed.

By EDWIN S. POTTER,
Editor Universal News Analysts.

Despite the Depression,
Republicans Retain Control.

Looking now calmly and dispassionately back across the field of conflicting interests and balancing forces which shaped the American presidential campaign of 1908, one incontestable conclusion forces itself on the open mind. It is that a majority of the people became convinced in one way or another that it is "better to fear the evils that they have than to fly to others that they know not of" and to give the trust regulating policies of President Roosevelt a longer and fairer trial in the hands of his favorite adviser, William Howard Taft. How the people became so minded is a question to which no answer can be found to suit all kinds of partisans. The salient facts can, however, be recounted briefly and with historical impartiality.

On Jan. 31 was issued the challenge of the dominant personality and official of the party in power which was to determine in many ways the plans of battle of the different parties for the capture of the American electorate—namely, the message of President Roosevelt to congress advocating his program of radical legislation.

On June 16 at Chicago the Republicans got together. They cheered forty minutes when Chairman Lodge eulogized the president and seated all the Taft contestants. The thoroughness of this operation caused it to be described as the administration "steam roller," of which Frank H. Hitchcock was the engineer. The only fight was on the court injunction plank. Samuel Gompers, head of the A. F. of L., and other leaders of organized labor, confronted with numerous court decisions unfavorable to their methods and facing lower wages or lack of work for many workers, had decided to fight in the open for the party whose labor plank suited them best. Despite the warnings of the Gompers "cabinet" before the platform committee the plank finally adopted at Chicago was not to their liking. Van Cleave, Cannon, Crane and other Republican leaders insisted upon upholding the integrity of the courts, but asserting that the rules of injunction procedure be "more accurately defined by statute" and that no injunction should issue without due notice "except where irreparable injury would result from delay." William H. Taft of Ohio was nominated for president on the first ballot and James S. Sherman of New York for vice president.

On July 7 at Denver the national convention of the Democratic party assembled with the knowledge that an overwhelming majority of its delegates were pledged to the nomination of William J. Bryan of Nebraska. The big gathering broke all records for continuous cheering when the blind Oklahoma senator, Gore, eulogized the Nebraskan, the demonstration lasting eighty-seven minutes. Bryan was nominated on the first ballot, although the names of Johnson and Gray were presented. John W. Kern of Indiana, with the approval of Bryan, was named for second place.

As in the Republican convention, the main contest had to do with the wording of the injunction or labor plank of the platform. Gompers was present and gave his assent to the plank finally agreed upon. While asserting that the "courts of justice are the bulwark of our liberty," it demanded a modification of the injunction law so as to provide for a trial by jury in cases of indirect contempt. It declared against treating labor organizations as illegal combinations in restraint of trade, favored the eight hour day and promised a general employers' liability law.

Bryan at once induced his executive committee to say that it would reject all corporate gifts, would limit individual donations to $10,000 and would publish on Oct. 15 and daily thereafter the names of donors of $100 and upward. The final total published after election was $620,044 from 75,000 contributors. Although the Republican convention had rejected a publicity plank, Taft and his managers decided to work under the New York law and publish names and amounts of contributors after the election. Their funds totaled $1,655,548.

Frank H. Hitchcock, who had engineered the Taft canvass, was chosen chairman of the Republican national committee, and George R. Sheldon was made treasurer. The Democrats elected Norman E. Mack, the Buffalo newspaper proprietor, as their national chairman and Governor Haskell of Oklahoma as holder of the purse. When Treasurer Haskell resigned, his place was filled by Herman Ridder, editor of the New York Staats-Zeitung.

July 28, at Cincinnati, Taft delivered his speech of acceptance. He frankly accepted the role of "me too" by defending the Roosevelt policies in their entirety and explaining that his work, if elected, would be to carry on those reforms in detail.

Aug. 12, at Lincoln, Neb., Bryan was notified of his nomination and sounded the keynote of his campaign in the question, "Shall the people rule?" In subsequent speeches he gave great prominence to the bank guaranty plan, to the popular election of senators and to campaign publicity before election. He made a special bid for the labor vote on the injunction plank. He would destroy all trusts controlling over 50 per cent of an industry.

Regarding the depression as the beginning of the breakdown of the capitalist system and claiming the army of idle workers as their asset, the Socialists of America went into the campaign with better weapons than ever before. On May 10 the Socialist convention met at Chicago. For the first time the Socialists of America affirmed their position on specific questions of policy. The convention nominated on the first ballot unanimously Eugene V. Debs for president and Benjamin Hanford for vice president, the same ticket put up by the Socialists in 1904.

The Prohibitionists, conscious of the great strides their cause had made on the local option issue in many states, nominated Eugene W. Chafin of Illinois and Aaron S. Watkins of Ohio July 15 at Columbus, O., on a platform containing many radical proposals besides that against the sale or manufacture of intoxicants.

On July 28 at Chicago the first national convention of the Independence party, outgrowth of the league organized by Editor Hearst, named Thomas L. Hisgen of Massachusetts and John Temple Graves of Georgia on a platform containing most of the radical ideas of the Democrats and some more radical. Opposition to Bryan was its keynote.

The People's party April 3 at St. Louis again named Thomas E. Watson of Georgia as its standard bearer along with S. W. Williams of Indiana, although it did not put a ticket up in all of the states.

On Sept. 15, at Columbus, O., Hearst stirred up the hitherto calm current of the campaign by reading into his speech the first batch of a series of letters which had been stolen from the files of the Standard Oil company and which threw a sinister light on the activities of various public men, notably Foraker, Bailey, MacLaurin, Shiley, certain Pennsylvania judges and ex-Governor Stone, who was urged to appoint them. Most of the letters were written by Vice President Archibald of the trust and contained divers certificates of deposit for large sums of money. At the same time Hearst repeated the story of the alleged attempt to bribe former Attorney General Monett of Ohio wherefore Haskell, the Democratic treasurer, was made to figure. As governor of Oklahoma Haskell also was accused of protecting a legal branch of the Standard. Foraker at once withdrew from the campaign, and the president issued a hot statement condemning the Ohioan and gave out an old letter showing how Taft had refused to deal with Foraker; then compared this course to that of Bryan and Haskell. Bryan replied, demanding a hearing for Haskell, and then ensued a bitter verbal duel on personal and party issues. Haskell resigned, but protesting innocence, as did also Du Pont, the powder trust head, from the chairmanship of the Republican speakers' bureau. Both the president and Taft took the ground that publishing names of contributors before election would be to invite unfair and partisan criticism of candidates.

Gompers appealed to all unions in the A. F. of L. to give moral and financial support to Bryan. Speaker Cannon was the special target of the Gompers battery, and "Cannonism" became a national issue, many candidates for congress being pledged against Cannon as the next speaker.

On Nov. 3 the voters of the nation had their say. The extent of the Republican victory can be best remembered by the statement that Taft carried every state that Roosevelt did in 1904 except Nebraska, Colorado and Nevada. Furthermore, Taft invaded the solid south with small pluralities in Maryland and Missouri and large gains in other southern states. The popular vote stood: Taft, 7,637,676; Bryan, 6,393,182; Debs, 447,651; Chafin, 41,252; Hisgen, 33,186; Watson, 33,871; Gilhaus (Socialist-Labor), 15,421; total, 14,852,239. The total vote in 1904 was 13,510,708. Several states in the Taft column elected Democratic governors—Harmon in Ohio, Marshall in Indiana and Johnson in Minnesota. Taft captured the Democratic stronghold of New York city. The Republican majority in congress was reduced to 47, the total being 219 and the Democratic 172. The senate's Republican complexion was unchanged.

The early months of the long session of congress were devoted chiefly to the Republican wrangle over the terms of a currency bill. The Aldrich relief measure finally went through the senate March 28 despite the all night filibuster of La Follette, to propitiate whom the railroad bond feature had been cut out. La Follette named an oligarchy of fourteen wealthy men who, he said, actually ruled the nation. The Vreeland bill, in which clearing house associations were made the channel of the new currency issue, was passed by the house, and then a compromise between that and the Aldrich bill, with provision for a joint commission to report on permanent reforms, was adopted by both branches and signed by the president.

Under the president's prodding the Sterling Liability bill was advanced by the majority and passed unanimously in both houses. This holds interstate carriers liable for injuries to employees and abolishes the rule barring compensation when the negligence of a fellow employee can be proved.

The Democratic filibuster was met by a gag rule and daily recess until the majority had accomplished its purpose. This included provision for two new battleships instead of the four urged by the president, higher pay for army officers and privates and a liability law to protect employees in the service of the government. The house failed to pass the anti-injunction and anti-trust amendment to the Sherman law desired by the president in the interest of labor. "In God We Trust" was restored to the gold coins. The total appropriations of the session reached the record figure of $1,804,000,894.

Congress reassembled Dec. 7 and received the final Roosevelt message, in which executive control of legalized trusts was advocated and judges were urged to heed the will of legislators according to present day standards. A bitter controversy arose over one passage which intimated that congress had confined the secret service to the treasury department because members did not want to be investigated. The senate moved an investigation of the secret service, and the house demanded proof of the president's assertions.

Uncle Sam Insists
Upon Carrying a Big Stick.

The administration's foreign policy has exemplified well this year a favorite saying of the president, "Speak softly, but carry a big stick." This nation has preserved good feeling toward other nations, but at the same time has sent its battleship fleet to the antipodes and devoted much thought and money to navy and army betterments.

March 11 at Magdalena bay the fleet ended its voyage around the Horn, in command of Evans, and was wildly welcomed all along the coast to San Francisco. Evans then gave up the command to Sperry, and on July 7 the fleet sailed from San Francisco on its record breaking naval practice cruise, visiting Hawaii, New Zealand, Australia, Japan, China and the Philippines before the year's end.

The war department changed heads July 1. Luke E. Wright succeeding Taft.

On May 5 the state department concluded a five year arbitration treaty with Japan. On Nov. 30 notes were signed containing an agreement with Japan for concert of action in maintaining the status quo in the orient, a virtual alliance.

The treasury in January had a deficit of $10,000,000, which grew to $80,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year.

The postoffice department, by order of the president, ruled that papers in foreign languages must submit translations and authorized postmasters to exclude papers containing incitement to murder, arson and treason. In May the parcel limit to England was raised to eleven pounds, and Oct. 1 the postal rate to that country was lowered to 2 cents, later the same to Germany.

On Aug. 14 the president appointed a commission, headed by Professor L. H. Bailey of Cornell, to gather data looking to betterment of farm life.

May 13 to 15 at the White House the first conference of state governors and noted men met the president to discuss the conservation of national resources, the conference making a new element of national unity. This body reassembled Dec. 8 and approved a great scheme of waterways by a bond issue.

Old World Rulers
Had a Nerve Racking Year.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The government of King Edward began the year with a program of radical legislation, including old age pensions, frankly intended as a sop to socialism, which showed signs of rapid growth along with the increase of the vast army of the unemployed. Asquith took the reins April 5, when Premier Bannerman retired on account of continued illness. Asquith carried through the age pension bill July 20, the plan of which is $1.25 a week to all over seventy years of age whose income is under $150 a year, to take effect Jan. 1, 1909. The Asquith government encountered a boisterous campaign for woman suffrage, the suffragettes organizing huge parades and rushes on the parliament to attract attention, many women choosing prison terms rather than give bonds to keep the peace. Alarm over the signs of coming revolt throughout India has increased, with numerous acts of violence against the ruling Britons. CANADA felt the effects of the American depression in decreased exports and in a halt in her industrial development. The general elections Oct. 26 sustained the Laurier government. A great historical pageant marked the tercentenary of Quebec, the Prince of Wales attending.

GERMANY.—The German people will remember the year 1908 as marking the end of their kaiser's absolute, personal rule and the beginning of ministerial responsibility to the Reichstag. This revolution through the power of public opinion voiced in the radical press and in parliamentary action of nearly all parties came to a head in October, the occasion of the outburst being an authorized interview in the London Telegraph in which the kaiser told of his refusal to join a secret coalition against England during the Boer war and of sending war planes to the queen. It was like the last straw. The Reichstag called Von Bulow to account, and William made concessions.

TURKEY.—The haven of democracy showed signs of working even in the European stronghold of autocratic Islam. The sultan of Turkey saw his army turning from him under the influence of the Young Turk party and thus powerless, he put into effect the hitherto dead letter constitution of 1876 and called into being a national parliament at Constantinople. This body met amid rejoicing Dec. 17.

THE BALKANS.—On Oct. 5 the whole status of southeastern Europe was suddenly altered. Bulgaria proclaimed its independence, with Prince Ferdinand as its czar and at the same time by concerted arrangement Austria announced to the powers that she proposed to annex completely the former Turkish provinces of Herzegovina and Bosnia, while the Turkish island of Crete moved toward a union with Greece. War seemed unavoidable then, and the clouds still lower in the diplomatic sky as a gloomy omen of what the new year may have in store. The prompt action of the powers on motion of Russia in agreeing to hold a conference to readjust the balance in the Balkans, the opening of negotiations between Bulgaria and Turkey and the military impotence of Serbia and Montenegro combined to prevent an immediate outbreak. Later Turkey began a boycott of Austrian goods, and all the Balkan states prepared for war.

PORTUGAL.—The ferment of Republicanism in the Portuguese monarchy after long restraint found vent in the assassination of King Carlos and Crown Prince Luiz Feb. 1 while they were riding in the streets of Lisbon. The younger son, Manuel, who was slightly wounded, succeeded to the throne, and the hated Premier Franco fled the country. Subsequent elections showed the Conservatives still in a large majority.

MOROCCO.—On Aug. 24 the oft repeated story of the defeat of Sultan Abdul Aziz by the forces of the pretender, Mulai Haifa, proved to be true, and the latter demanded recognition of the powers as the sultan. That was where the German emperor made a peck of trouble by recognizing Haifa without consulting the nations in the Algeiras conference. France firmly objected, Spain seconded, and the kaiser "came down." Then they all bowed to Haifa together.

PERFIA.—The Radical first parliament at Teheran under the constitution granted in 1907 was wiped out of existence in a bloody battle with the shah's soldiers June 23. 400 persons being killed in the streets, the parliament buildings battered down and some of the Radical leaders executed. The revolutionists captured and held Tabriz.

JAPAN.—The Japanese government gave the American fleet a wonderful reception, the mikado and the president exchanging most cordial greetings.

CHINA.—On Nov. 13 Emperor Kwang Sen and the dowager empress, who had been for a generation the real ruler of China, died. Pu Yi the infant son of Prince Chun, had been designated as heir to the throne, and the regency was seized by Prince Chun.

CENTRAL AMERICA hovered on the verge of war, but finally the issues were laid before the new Central American court of justice, which was set up May 26 at Cartago, Costa Rica, with all the states represented.

VENEZUELA added Holland to the list of her "don't speak" neighbors by expelling the Dutch minister for some indiscretion, and the Dutch were hot for coercion. They began war Dec. 13 by capturing the Venezuelan coast guard ship, Alis. Sleeper, the American minister, finally broke off relations and quit the country owing to the failure of the Castro government responding to the overtures from Washington as to a settlement of claims. The Venezuelan minister later was recalled from Washington. President Castro sailed for Europe the last of November.

CUBA rose to her new opportunity with orderly elections in December. Jose Miquel Gomez, the Liberal leader, being chosen president.

HAITI was torn by two revolts, that led by Jeanne and Firmin in January being crushed, but the second, under Antoine Simon, resulting in the bloodless capture of Port au Prince and the fall of the Nord Alexis government Dec. 2. As the forces of Simon approached the capital the officers of Alexis deserted and the people turned against him, so that he was barely able to escape with his life on board a French warship. Simon took possession of the city and on Dec. 17 was elected president by the Haitian congress.

This is a new edition of that famous fantasy "The Will of Charles Lounsbury." We publish this with the consent of the author, Wiliston Fish, Esq., of Chicago, and Mr. Fish has written a delightful bit of biography for this edition. "A Last Will" first appeared in Harper's Weekly 10 years ago and has now become a classic. A beautiful and most appropriate gift. Price 25 cents.

The CALEDONIAN Co.,

St. Johnsbury, Vt.

A Genuine Food that nourishes the hens and supplies just those elements required by nature to produce strong shelled, perfect eggs. It contains no diseased meat, or meat of any kind save tallow scraps, neither does it contain any red pepper, hot drops, or other irritant that temporarily warms up the fowls and then reacts, leaving the system worse off than before.

It is a real Food, rich in nitrogenous ingredients and just what laying hens need at all times. It is now generally conceded that as an egg producer there is nothing better than

Page's Perfected Poultry Food.
